Repair No. 252/03.

TO HUGH SWEENY, M. D.

MY DEAR DOCTOR,

I BEG leave to present to you this work. A single leaf may, indeed, exhibit only a convenient arrangement of names: the whole undertaking may, nevertheless, deserve more regard, and prove no unworthy tribute to a friend.

I offer it as a testimonial of the friendship so early and so uninterruptedly subsisting between us: a friendship I look back upon with pleasure and pride, and which has become an important part of the happiness of my life. In the enjoyment of that friendship, I subscribe myself sincerely,

Your affectionate humble servant,

CHARLES FREDERIC GRIM.

ADVERTISEMENT.

The aim of the subscriber in undertaking this work was to make a perfect Index, both in the arrangement, and in the fulness as well as accuracy of the references. With that object, although he thought to begin with transcripts made by him from the General Index in the Register's office, he would finally have gone over the records themselves, to prove and correct the work, and render it an Index on which full reliance could have been placed. This, however, has not been done. Before the subscriber had finished making his transcripts, the Register, not content with having forbidden the undertaking, took the volumes of the General Index from his hands. This put a stop to the further collection of materials. Those on hand were, nevertheless, arranged as well as could, under the circumstances, be done.

From the commencement of the undertaking, the subscriber was inclined to the printing of the work when completed, and quite as early he openly declared that such were his prepossessions; but it was not until after the occurrence above stated, that he came to a fixed determination to do so. As soon as he had made up his mind to print and publish it, he notified the counsel employed by the Register that such was his determination. This notification was made nearly a year ago, and nothing has been heard from him since. The work not having been compared with the General Index, or with the body of the records, doubtless contains multiplied inaccuracies. But it will yet be found of use in examinations of title.

It is perhaps proper to say, that when the volume of the General Index on which I was occupied was taken from my hands, mention was made by the Register of consultations about to be had with counsel. I called in due time for an answer. The answer was studied and complex; but the meaning of it was, that while I had right of access for the purpose of search, I had no right to prepare my means of searching. I proposed to bring down the arrangement to the year 1830; and, to save the scruples of a public officer, which I trust I respect, I offered to deposit the manuscript with him. But even to this, or to any thing else which had the arrangement in view, he refused to consent. For his refusals I see no good reason. My professional business, and my own affairs as a citizen, brought me to the place. It surely is no part of our system of government, that public convenience must yield to sluggish obstinacy, or the course of improvement be checked by an office-holder's will. But there is a political truth of more near application, and of far greater importance, though there are quarters in which it seems to be entirely forgotten. As an individual, I had a discretion, for the exercise of which the Register was in no wise responsible, for the uses of which I was not amenable to him, and which it was not for him to control. This discretion is inseparable from the individual as much as is his conscience. It goes with his person, and the responsibility for its use or abuse rests with himself; and that responsibility is ample. In the absence of positive enactment, public servants should not be ashamed to bow to this responsibility, and the office-holder should be ready to give place to the citizen. In the exercise of my individual rights, I began the work, and by virtue of those rights, I might claim to proceed: acting on my own responsibility, the Register should not have ventured to interrupt me.

In a separate part of this work will be found such deeds from the office of the Secretary of State, as relate to lands in the city and county of New-York; that is to say, as comprised in the books of deeds so lettered. Powers of attorney to sell lands are also embraced in this part, as well as those conveyances which from the general or uncertain words of description might be supposed to cover land in this county. It was at one time considered desirable to have some designations upon the references, more especially to separate the powers of attorney from the rest; but it was concluded to give no indication of the contents of any deed.

C. F. GRIM.
